Who Really Sank the Bismarck?

p.24

April 12, 1941. Adolf Hitler and his staff inspect Bismarck in Gdynia, Poland, before the battleship set sail for Operation Rheinübung.

COVER STORY

SPECIAL FEATURE

44 Persian Arrows: America's Winning Iran Strategy

The author of Armchair General's influential article "iGuerilla: The New Model Techno-Insurgent" turns his attention to Iran. By mining Iran's Persian history, he helps reveal what that country is up to today – and spells out what the United States should do about it. By JOHN SUTHERLAND

FEATURES

22 The Not-So-Great "Great Sioux War"

During the 19th century, U.S. military forces fought four identifiable "wars" with Native American Sioux tribes in the West. It is time to set the record straight about which of these conflicts was actually the "greatest." By GREGORY MICHINO

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

24 Who Really Sank the Bismarck?

An examination of the final days of the German battleship Bismarck raises an intriguing question: Did the vessel's commander intentionally lead Adolf Hitler's most famous warship on a one-way suicide mission? By BERNARD STANCATI

BATTLEFIELD LEADER

28 George Rogers Clark: Conqueror of the Old Northwest

Against all odds, this American Revolutionary War hero and his small force seized the vast western frontier for the new United States. By TAYLOR HOLBROOK

BATTLE STUDIES

36 Battle of Narvik, 1940

German General Eduard Dietl became a national hero by capturing Norway's most important port during World War II. By LARS GYLLENHAAL
